This WIKI was created by members of the 2013 GWSS “Writing to Change the World” class. We hope future classes will join us in honoring the leaders from the past and present who laid the groundwork for GWSS, in recognizing the great resources on campus for students in GWSS classes like WRAC (the Women's Resource and Action Center) and the Women's Archive in the University of Iowa Library, and in sharing your opinions and hopes for a more just world.

Thanks to students, staff, and faculty members who worked with us, especially our SITA partner Heather Draxl.

If your class would like to be part of the GWSStory, email Professor Teresa Mangum at teresa-mangum@uiowa.edu for more information.

Mission statement from the University of Iowa Department of Gender, Women’s, and Sexuality Studies website– “Gender, Women’s, and Sexuality Studies (GWSS) is an interdisciplinary field that promotes social justice and full citizenship by asking when and how gender intersects with sexuality, class, race, ethnicity, nationality, globalization, and physical ability in ways that can exclude and oppress, but that can also enrich cultures and expand opportunities. GWSS trains students to investigate how gender and sexuality shape challenges people face in areas such as the environment, culture and the media, education, health, violence, and the economy. Drawing upon history and interdisciplinary theories, our classes ask how the implications of these studies can help us address pressing problems at home and abroad.”
