Popularity of Distance Education

Prevalence of Distance Education

Over 1,000 universities had an increase of about 18% between the years of 2003-2004. Also in a 2003 study it had been reported by the National Center for Education Statistics that about 90% of public colleges and universities offered distance education. With about 1,680 universities offered over 54,000 online classes to their students which show how popular distance education has become over the last few decades. With the fast growing technological improvement it's not surprising that distance education tools has become more flexible, user-friendly, and financially reasonable. Also the amazing effect of the internet has helped to redesign traditional education in every way and encouraged teachers to imagine the endless possibilities that distance education can create using the internet.
